Editorial

HOW THE TRUTH HURTS!

Elsewhere in this edition we publish excerpts from a letter recently published in a "Voice of the People" column in a Richmond paper.

The bitter words of that article are not only a slap in the face to Appomattox, but to the entire nation. A town the size of Appomattox must not be expected to bear the entire burden of restoring and advertising, preserving and upholding the glory of a great national peace.

But, we are vitally concerned here at Appomattox, and it hurts us to realize that nothing is done to guide the tourists or historical student to Appomattox, nothing is done to tell him where to go and what to look for once he finds Appomattox, and thousands of people annually pass through Appomattox without having been able to actually find ONE THING OF HISTORICAL WORTH.

Were Appomattox lifted up and suddenly placed in New England or the Mid-West, for example, every automobile club in adjoining states would be regularly circled with dots, and dignified billboards of huge dimensions would dot the landscape as guides to hurried tourists, antique furniture, guns, flags, papers and documents would be preserved in a beautiful museum, every building and lane that had one iota of historical significance would be accurately restored to its period, and not one tourist could pass through the town without having felt that he had made a worthwhile pilgrimage to one of the outlandish and eminently great and hallowed spots of the world.

Instead, here we are, with care and service at the sacred Surrender Sites entrusted to the hands of an alert but inadequate group of small children, and even when we do make headway in procuring a beginning federal money for an appropriate "peace" monument, a cry of "REVIVED HATRED" echoes from the valley of the historical James River and was hushed into a sob on Appomattox fields. From the war-torn ruins and the travail of readjustment, came a new spirit, America dedicated anew to the principle of union, equality and opportunity. Destiny selected Appomattox, along with Waterloo, Yorktown and Chateau Thierry as one of the glorified spots of that universe, how long, shall we blush with shame as Appomattox alone of these great spots awaits in the dismal gloom of neglect?

Writer Says Appomattox Is "Desolate Spot" Now!

Appomattox Officials Asked To Meet Governor Pollard, Nearby Counties Are Asked

A writer in the Richmond Leader Voice of the People recently described Appomattox as a typical Goldsmith village, deserted, forsaken to the unrestrained havoc elements and the absolute lack of any human preserving instinct.
